Boeing-Airbus Deal Reached Suspending Tariffs

The U.S. and the European Union have reached a deal to end their trade dispute, and effectively suspend the tariffs for five years. The White House looks at this as a fresh start, but warned that they would reapply tariffs if the U.S producers are not able to compete fairly on a level playing field.

European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen commented that a working group will look at state support on a case-by-case basis to see if the level playing field is maintained. The working group also plans to meet at least yearly on the subject.

The E.U. and U.S. will also cooperate on countering investments in either area by non-market actors, and counter investments in China that are “influenced by non-market forces.”
